

TWO YANK ARMIES BREAK OUT INTO OPEN

Meandering

By WASH FAYETTE

A multitude of Americans who never knew the words of "The Star Spangled Banner" have learned them since the war opened, and now join in singing the famous song whenever opportunity offers.

Time after time I have been in audiences ranging from a few hundred to several thousands of people as they stood at the beginning of an entertainment or meeting and sang the national air, and it is always thrilling to hear the great volume of song as it rolls forth, sometimes under the direction of some individual, and at other times with orchestral accompaniment, depending upon the nature of the gathering.

While most of those in the audience sing, even if part of them do pour forth some sour notes, there are always some who do not join in the singing, and I often wonder why.

I hope that after the war is over this patriotic practice of singing the "Star Spangled Banner" will be continued at the opening of every meeting worth while. It helps keep the patriotic spirit alive in a great many hearts where patriotism is not always given the place it should have.

I just got back from a little walk around up street, and as I passed small groups of folks who were enjoying little visits on the sidewalks, I overheard fragments of conversation that showed a wide range of subjects being discussed.

I will repeat some of these bits of conversation as I recall them, with a little comment on the side:

"They were advertised in the paper for $1.39—" (She reads the advertisements). "Hey, kid! Let's go to a movie!" "I'm going to plant onions and lettuce next week for I—" "I just got a letter from him today, and they've moved him somewhere else—" "—and I'm going to give her a piece of my mind the next—" (Somebody is always mad at somebody else.)

"I think she is the dearest thing that was ever created, but her mother has spoiled her—" (There it is again.) "Every darned thing is so high that I don't care what you make it takes about all—" "I'm going in here and get a coke, and I'll buy you one—" (He was generous.)

"—and he's just a G—d—fool, and everybody knows it." (She looked like a perfect lady, too, but didn't swear like one.)

"I'm feeding them enough to get twice as many eggs as—" "—there's always a good fish in the sea as ever—" (And it takes bait to catch 'em.)

"I've just about cried my eyes out—" "—and then I said to him, says I—"

"Gimme that package, you little imp!" (He was a sweet looking little chap, and didn't look a bit impish.)

"I'd ought to be at home working, but I've got spring fever and you know—" (Yep! I have had it, too.)

"—she's so smart that she thinks nobody else knows anything but here, and I'm—" (So what!) "—it's her birthday and if I didn't bake her a cake she would have a conniption fit, so I'll have—" (Ah, ha! Somebody's not going to have a fit.)

Yes, it is interesting to hear them talk.

MIDNIGHT CURFEW RUNS INTO TANGLE
Enforcement Problem Takes Sudden New Turn

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(P)—The War Production Board said today it would invoke priority penalties against midnight curfew violators only when the War Manpower Commission certifies an employment ceiling has been violated.

Violation of the curfew itself will not bring halting of light, power or fuel or the suspension of priority privileges, a WPB spokesman said.

The first step in enforcement, it was stated, is the imposition of a low manpower ceiling by WMC upon the offending night club—or a "zero ceiling" which would put the place out of business by forbidding employment of war workers. If the ceiling were ignored, WMC would so certify to WPB.

FREMONT, March 26.—(P)—They have no time for glory in the infantry.

But Fremont, and Ohio, yesterday paid tribute to one footslogging infantryman whose glory will forever be a part of America's heritage—a simple small-town boy who, without thought of self, gave his life that his buddies might live.

Yanks Invading Ryukyu Islands On Way to Tokyo, Japs Report

By LEONARD MILLMAN
By The Associated Press

Unconfirmed Japanese broadcasts reported today American amphibious forces were "attempting to invade" two of the Ryukyu Islands, in the center of an area of announced air and naval attacks that knocked out 25 Japanese ships and crippled war industries in Japan and Formosa.

The Japanese invasion report said sea-borne Yanks struck at Toka and Aka islands about 15 miles west of Okinawa, major island of the Ryukyu chain.

Japanese propagandists said the islands were being attacked as springboards for an assault on Japan proper, about 350 miles to the northeast. If true, the action represents a departure from the recent practice of heavy and lengthy pre-invasion bombardments.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced the Ryukyus were shelled by the 16-inch guns of America's most modern battleships Friday and Saturday while carrier planes swept over half a dozen islands, centering their attack on Okinawa. Tokyo said 58 warships and innumerable auxiliaries made up the carrier and bombardment force, which it reported southwest of Okinawa.

Jap Convoy Wiped Out
Sea-borne planes reached to the northern tip of the Ryukyus where they wiped out an eight-ship convoy consisting of three cargo vessels and five escorting warcraft.

Three other Japanese vessels were damaged off the northern Ryukyus and the Bonins by naval search planes presumably operating from newly conquered Iwo.

Fourteen more were destroyed or damaged off the China coast by (Please Turn To Page Two)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—(P)—Reports reached Hollywood today of the December-June marriage and honeymoon of 56-year-old Al Jolson and his actress protegee, Erle Balbraith, 22.

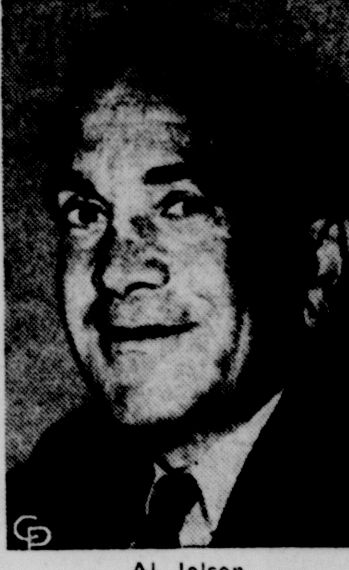

The gammy singer and the brunette miss from Little Rock, Ark., were married Saturday by a justice of the peace at Quartzsite, Ariz. It was Erle's first marriage, Jolson's fourth.

Blonde Iris Adrien filed for divorce from George Jacob, New York restaurant man.

Cowboy star Roy Rogers' induction was deferred until June 3 so he can finish a picture, and Jon Hall, Universal's star, was reclassified 1-A.

the actor denied reports they would be divorced.

TRI-SLAYING TRIAL WAITS FOR DEFENSE

Man Indicted for Killing Three In 'Family Trouble'

PIKEVILLE, Ky., March 26.—(P)—The commonwealth rested its case today in the murder trial of Anderson Adkins, 33, indicted in the fatal shooting of three relatives and the serious wounding of a fourth, and the court recessed until afternoon when the defense is expected to open.

The commonwealth has asked the death penalty. Adkins is being tried only on a charge of murder in the death of a sister-in-law, Mrs. Orbin K. Long, 34. He also has been indicted in the slaying of another sister-in-law, Mrs. Tom Johnson, 49, and a brother-in-law, Clarence Blackburn.

The final commonwealth witness was Mrs. Burton Bentley, a third sister-in-law, who was shot three times and permanently blinded during the "family trouble" which resulted in the three deaths.

The commonwealth charges Adkins blamed his in-laws for breaking up his marriage.

Toughest Nazi Wanted By Fifth

By DON WHITEHEAD
(Substituting for Hal Boyle)
WITH THE FIRST ARMY—(P)—If anybody but the First Infantry Division captures the terrible tempered Col. Becker, everybody in this veteran outfit is going to be sore. They feel he belongs to them personally.

The division has built up quite a history on Col. Becker, who is one of the toughest, meanest, roughest Nazi officers who ever sent his troops into a counterattack.

The First Division encountered the colonel and his Fifth Paratroop regiment in Normandy beachhead days and he was formidable opposition. He is so ornery and tough his own men admire him. Prisoners of war taken from the Fifth Paratroop regiment always are willing to tell stories about their colonel, and he always is showing up opposite the First.

On one sub-zero day a German soldier with frozen feet was being taken back to the hospital for treatment when he ran into Col. Becker.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the colonel with ire. "My feet are frozen," the soldier (Please Turn To Page Two)

SCHOOL BUDGET LESS THAN 1944, OEA CONTENTS

Claim That Increase Was Provided in Ohio Based on Technicality, Charge

COLUMBUS, March 26.—(P)—The Ohio Education Association contends Gov. Frank J. Lausche's proposed biennium budget for Ohio schools would reduce state support of the educational system as the claimed increase was "founded on a technicality."

The OEA said the governor's proposal of $54,200,000 for a calendar year is a million dollars less than state money provided in 1944.

The association said its figures showed the school had $46,208,867 in state funds for operating purposes in 1943, and in 1944 received $55,315,282.

H. D. Defenbach, state finance director, has declared the governor's budget of $106,220,000 is approximately $2,500,000 more than schools received in state aid during the last biennium.

Walton B. Bliss, OEA executive secretary, said the claim "that the schools will receive an increase is founded on a technicality." He added:

"It is easy to put together a year of neglect, as 1943 was, and a year of relief, as 1944 was, and from the average of these two years establish the notion that school aid is being increased. Realistically, the year 1944 alone is a fair and honest measuring stick for the years 1945 and 1946."

WOMAN'S NUDE BODY DISCOVERED ON FARM

Verdict of Homicide Issued by Coroner

HAMILTON, March 26.—(P)—Coroner Edward Cook today issued a verdict of homicide in the death of a woman, between 30 and 35, whose nude body was found on a farm west of here yesterday.

Cook said the woman had been slain a week ago. He said there were three stab wounds in the head, severe bruises on the neck and evidence that the woman had been criminally assaulted before she was killed. No clothing or any other means of identification were found.

The coroner reported Joseph Burns, R. R. 1, Oxford, found the body in a ravine on his farm.

Nazi Defenses Collapse Under Allied Attacks

Reds Only 77 Miles from Vienna in New Drive in South To Cut Off Possible Retreat of German War Leaders to Last Stand in Mountains—Aerial Assault Continues To Spread Devastation Over Ruins of Bomb-battered Reich—Planes Blast Path for Surging Ground Forces and Hit Transportation—Third Army Pacing Dash for Berlin from the West

By ALTON B. BLAKESLEE
By The Associated Press

U. S. Third army tanks wheeled across the main river 235 miles southwest of Berlin today in a swift lunge through disorganized German defenses, and three other Allied armies slashed from 10 to 12 miles or more beyond the Rhine in breakthrough drives.

The Fourth Armored division of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army dashed 40 miles from the Rhine and seized the Main River bridge at Aschaffenburg, 235 miles from Berlin, and within 250 miles of Russians fighting south east of the Nazi capital. Patton's men reached the Main at two other points, forged new crossings of Rhine, and struck to within six miles of outflanked Frankfurt-on-the-Main. There were Stockholm reports that American troops had entered Frankfurt.

Northwestward, the U. S. First army tore 12 miles forward from its Ramagen bridgehead, in a breakthrough which front dispatches termed reminiscent of the St. Lo drive in Normandy.

Eisenhower at Front
Gen. Eisenhower, smiling broadly from a jeep crossing a pontoon bridge across the Rhine, visited the First army front where sweeping new gains were made eastward.

"I expect them (the First army) to lick everybody they come up against," Eisenhower said. "They did it all the way across France and I see no reason why they should stop on the road to Berlin."

On the northern flank, the U. S. Ninth army surged at least 10 miles past the Rhine and was beyond Duisburg in the scarred Ruhr. The British Second army knocked 10 miles past its Rhine crossings, hopped the Issel River, and battled onto the Westphalian Plain on the northern approach to Berlin.

A German military spokesman said today that "fighting is going on outside Karlsruhe," possibly indicating a crossing of the Rhine by the U. S. Seventh army.

"The decisive fighting of the whole war now is unequivocally under way in the west," a German military spokesman said by radio from Berlin, 235 miles from vanguards of Patton's army.

The Ninth army fought in the northeast suburbs of Duisburg, inland port of 4331,000, and within ten miles of Essen, where the sprawling Krupp Works have been rebuilt seven times after bombers' calls.

The Germans reported fighting outside the Baden capital of Karlsruhe, suggesting yet another crossing by the Seventh army, which had cleared the Palatinate and routed the last Germans west of the Rhine between Switzerland and Holland.

The whole Western Front was becoming fluid as Gen. Eisenhower's offensive turned into a powerful floodtide. The humblest infantryman sensed complete victory over Germany, because the Russians also were pushing in from the east in massive power.

With troops 136 miles deep in the heart of Germany and the Rhine crossed at seven places, the Third army threw yet another bridgehead across the upper Rhine at an undisclosed place where the (Please Turn To Page Six)

Food Investigation Puts Spotlight On Supply in Canada

Compromise Manpower Legislation Which Takes Top Place in House Is Believed Developing Into Anti-strike Measure Aimed at Soft Coal Miners

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(P)—Senators asked today why Great Britain does not get more meat from Canada and less from the United States as they began a broad investigation into the nation's food situation.

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) told the Agriculture subcommittee he understood the Canadians had ample meat and recommended an inquiry into why more of it is not used for lend-lease.

Senator Shipstead (R., Minn.) said his information was that butter was unrationed in Canada.

(Government agencies announced recently that lend-lease meat shipments to Britain are being drastically cut for this quarter.)

As the committee began its hearings, Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) announced one aim would be to "uncover and destroy" black markets.

"Using the power of subpoena," he said, "the committee will, if necessary, compel the production of records which will expose the black market operations in meat, chickens, butter, sugar and other food products."

Conflicting Impressions
Wheeler said he had heard the government would not let meat be brought into this country from Canada although the Canadians were anxious to export it.

5-YEAR SENTENCE FOR DRAFT DODGER

CINCINNATI, March 26.—(P)—The Sixth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed the conviction of William Thomas Klopp, 38, Middletown furniture company executive, on a charge of violating the Selective Service Act.

Klopp, claiming membership in a religious sect opposed to war, refused to accept draft board reclassification as a conscientious objector, and declined as well to report to a civilian camp.

He was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $3,800.

$350,000 IS ASKED IN OHIO JUNIOR FAIR

COLUMBUS, March 26.—(P)—Bryan Sandles, assistant agriculture director and manager of the State Junior Fair, said today efforts would be made to restore a $350,000 appropriation for a new Junior Fair building in the current state biennium budget.

Sandles said the money was earmarked in 1941 and 1943 budgets but does not appear in the 1945 budget recommendations. He said money had been spent to prepare working plans for a new three-story brick building, but construction was halted by the war.

The Junior Fair was held annually in conjunction with the Ohio State Fair, now canceled until after the war.

INVESTIGATION ORDERED
COLUMBUS, March 26.—(P)—An investigation of complaints that state liquor store personnel show "favoritism to personal friends" and violate Ohio's whiskey rationing regulations has been ordered by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

COLLETT STILL CLAIMING HE'S INNOCENT MAN

Wants Toledo Detective To Intercede To Save Him From Chair

James W. Collett, whose hearing from the electric chair will be held before the State Pardon and Parole Commission on Wednesday, has given out another statement for publication in which he asks Lieut. George Eckerman, Toledo detective, to intercede for him, and also criticizes former sheriff, W. H. Icenhower.

The statement was given to a Columbus newspaper man who visited Collett in "death row" and is in line with other statements he has issued.

Collett said that he had written Eckerman to "come forth and tell the truth rather than let me die." He claims his confession was made by third degree methods, a claim that has been refuted by several officials, including former Sheriff Icenhower, and Prosecutor John B. Hill.

"Eckerman knows now that my physical condition was such that the confession should not be regarded as evidence," he said, contending that a neck injury suffered in a fall had so weakened him that he was not responsible for his admissions.

Collett asserted that the full truth of the entire investigation has never been disclosed.

Now, however, he said, he is writing a full account of "actual facts" which he plans to publicize in either magazines or newspapers.

He released a prepared statement in which he contended false statements had been given regarding one phase of his case.

"As myself and family have been bombarded by the press especially at first and my attorneys refused me to answer, the public so far know only one side of the case.

"The first thing Sheriff Icenhower handed to the Fayette County paper was that this tragedy happened on one Grange night and that I had not missed a meeting in many years. So that was pictured as very suspicious to start with. I was a member of our Grange and I served as an officer for 25 consecutive years, and I also was a member of the Astronomical Society in Wilmington. I asked to be relieved as an officer of the Grange as the meetings of the two organizations came on the same night, so that I might have an opportunity to attend the Astronomy Club when I felt well enough.

"So the truth of it is in the first five or six years preceding this terrible tragedy, I had seldom attended Grange meetings or any public meeting on account of a fall which injured my neck.

"Shortly after I was taken in custody the sheriff asked me for a written permission to search our farm which I gladly gave him, and he said, 'Now I'll be seeing your wife and don't you want to write a few words on the other side of this permit that will cheer her up, and I will give it to her to read,' and he said he did.

"But the truth of it was I found out from my wife later, he only read it to her in her own language, and not what I had written to her at all, and came back to Washington C. H. and gave the paper something nasty which she never said, and I believe her for she tells the truth.

"So instead of cheering her, he took this opportunity to cause her more grief and pain. If he thought it took the life blood of a heart-broken wife to be rejected with, he was fooled because the people of Fayette County voted him out of office at the fall election.

"May God forgive an officer that will stoop so low to get untruthful evidence against anyone to poison the minds of the public with as I said lately in a letter that was published. The letter of evidence and the manner in which it was obtained shows me plainly that it was for personal glory."

It is estimated that one out of every 200 people has some form of epilepsy.

WALKIE-TALKIE FOR CIVILIANS SEEN BY NAVY

Training Will Help Youths in Postwar Fields; FCC Praises Radio

Emphasizing the importance of utilizing military training in the postwar world as a means of earning power, Lieut. Commander L. E. Oehring, Officer in Charge of Navy Recruiting and Induction for the Columbus area, emphasized the radio technician training program of the Navy.

The recruiting officer mentioned the new civilian walkie talkie service which makes possible such innovations as the summoning of physicians by radio telephone and farm-to-tractor communication, as one of the fields in which a Navy-trained radio technician can utilize his electronic training. This sort of civilian walkie talkie was recently envisaged by a Federal Communications Commission in a document expressing this agency's views on post war equipment.

The FCC has expanded at length on the walkie talkie, said, Commander Oehring as he talked of the benefits of the training program.

Born in wartime, it can be operated with suitcase size portable equipment. The band from 460,000 to 470,000 kilocycles has been set aside for its use.

Declaring that "the possible uses of this service are as broad as the imagination of the public and the ingenuity of the equipment manufacturers," the FCC added:

"The band can be used to establish a physician's calling service which can reach doctors while they are enroute and not available by telephone.

"Business organizations can use this service for communication between their offices and delivery vehicles, service units, and other mobile outfits. It can also be used on farms to reach the men in the fields," added the commission.

The recruiting officer drew attention to the fact that ease of operation will build a strong civilian market and that radio technicians in the Navy would find their place in the maintenance of the equipment and in research and development.

Commander Oehring pointed out that the radio technician training program is open to men who qualify for this training by passing the Eddy Test, an examination that requires no technical experience and one which determines a man's ability to absorb radar training. He said that men who enter the Navy through selective service as well as those who enlist in the 17 and 38 to 50 age brackets are eligible.

The schooling lasts 11 months and deals with radio, electronics, electricity, radar and allied subjects. Those who successfully complete the course are rated a petty officer in the navy and during their entire schooling have a minimum rate of seaman first class, the rate they receive upon qualifying for the course.

The recruiting officer said that full information is available at any Navy Recruiting Station and he advised all interested applicants to inquire for information on subjects that might require review before taking the test. In Chillicothe, the Navy Recruiting Station is located at the Post Office, Telephone 28-386.

Reporter With Airborne Troops Has Narrow Escape Across Rhine

By ROBERT C. WILSON
PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—Twenty-nine parachute troops hurried themselves from the C-46 troop carrier on which I was a passenger at 10:16 A. M. Saturday—three minutes after we crossed the smoke-masked Rhine.

Suddenly the plane shuddered. A wing spurted flames. There was a sickening thud as flak ripped into the ship. A few minutes later I was crawling out of my parachute in a German field six miles east of the river.

I was too stunned by the jar I got when I landed to recall much detail. Moreover, I was occupied with getting out of the paths of British gliders swooping into the field.

One of the ships struck power wires, careened past me and crashed into flames. Another skimmed inches over my head and nosed into the earth.

I thought everyone was killed but a half dozen Tommies spilled out. One pointed a gun at me.

I waved a white handkerchief, shouting: "I'm an American. Don't shoot."

Later Lt. James Leadson confided that he had been about to shoot because he thought my uniform was something new in German dress. I was wearing a U. S. "Paris type" dress uniform.

By 11 A. M. the British airborne soldiers had taken a farmhouse at the end of the field in which there were six German soldiers. We had a dozen wounded with us. Machineguns chattered and snipers' bullets whined.

By noon we had an anti-tank gun set up and one artillery piece in place. Then we waited.

At 3 P. M. we were still waiting. Liberator bombers had come in at suicide height—100 feet—to drop supplies. But they had missed our immediate area.

We shot up a Nazi tank across the road. Montgomery's artillery from the west was pouring shells over our heads into German positions.

After nightfall an eight man patrol went out to raid a German ack-ack emplacement. Two came back.

At 2 A. M. the tremendous roar of a Nazi field gun shook the farm house. A machine gun opened fire and rifles began crackling. I was shaking all over and could hardly write.

Shells set the house on fire. I raced upstairs to a back bedroom with a half dozen British soldiers. They kicked out the window and jumped down. The Germans were outside. I decided to stay in the room.

In 15 minutes things quieted down somewhat. Then I dropped out the window. The fire lit everything up like daylight.

Philippines-based bombers. Fighter-escorted Liberators from the Philippines destroyed the Jitsugetsu hydroelectric plant supplying perhaps two-thirds of the war industries on southern Formosa including two aluminum plants supplying 15 percent of Japan's aluminum.

Marianas-based B-29s, in the tenth raid on Nagoya in about three months, destroyed much of the Mitsubishi aircraft engine plant and damaged four other war industries. Three planes failed to return.

The B-29s struck before dawn Sunday morning, a few hours before the reported Ryukyu invasion attempt. The naval and aerial bombardment demonstrates the remarkable staying power of Admiral Raymond A. Spruance's 5th Fleet and its fast carrier task force commanded by Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher. Only a week ago they raided southwestern Japan for two days.

Japanese ground troops in central China advanced as much as 25 miles along a 90-mile front while their comrades in Burma and the Philippines suffered further reverses. One Japanese column seized Ichang, 145 miles northwest of Hankow and only 35 miles from a U. S. air base.

British forces captured six towns in central Burma.

Six Japanese counterattacks were repulsed by the U. S. 25th and 32nd divisions on northern Luzon Island in the Philippines while the First Cavalry began a drive toward the heretofore untouched southern arm of Luzon.

Cebu, in the central Philippines, was heavily bombed for the sixth consecutive day, possibly in preparation for another invasion.

The Japanese radio today reported the first raid by Nipponese planes on Iwo "since its fall into enemy hands."

The unconfirmed dispatch said the raiders caused fires and explosions at many points.

house at the end of the field in which there were six German soldiers. We had a dozen wounded with us. Machineguns chattered and snipers' bullets whined.

By noon we had an anti-tank gun set up and one artillery piece in place. Then we waited.

At 3 P. M. we were still waiting. Liberator bombers had come in at suicide height—100 feet—to drop supplies. But they had missed our immediate area.

We shot up a Nazi tank across the road. Montgomery's artillery from the west was pouring shells over our heads into German positions.

After nightfall an eight man patrol went out to raid a German ack-ack emplacement. Two came back.

At 2 A. M. the tremendous roar of a Nazi field gun shook the farm house. A machine gun opened fire and rifles began crackling. I was shaking all over and could hardly write.

Shells set the house on fire. I raced upstairs to a back bedroom with a half dozen British soldiers. They kicked out the window and jumped down. The Germans were outside. I decided to stay in the room.

In 15 minutes things quieted down somewhat. Then I dropped out the window. The fire lit everything up like daylight.

said. "What color are they?" queried the colonel.

"White," the soldier said. "Go back to your foxhole until they turn blue," Becker ordered.

On another occasion the colonel heard complaints that his troops' feet were freezing as they stood in foxholes with no relief.

"If their feet are freezing," the colonel was quoted as saying, "they can kick each other to keep them warm."

Once when his troops were cold, wet and hungry he sent word that if he heard anymore complaints he'd cut off their ration for a week.

Becker always is ordering his men to "fight to death" and "do or die"—but he rarely gets any nearer the front than 12 kilometers.

There is one story on the colonel that during the American breakthrough in Normandy he ordered his men to "hold to the end," then took his regiment only usable vehicle and scrambled.

"He's tough one," said Lt. Col. Robert Evans, of Davenport, Iowa. "He puts on the toughest counter-attacks of anybody we fought against you and you can always bet his ground is well organized."

Once the terrible tempered Becker roughened up one battalion of the First Division in the Hurtgen Forest and received personal praise from Hitler. But the First has kicked Becker's Fifth Paratroop regiment around so much they always are surprised when he shows up again with a reformed outfit.

A year before Gen. Douglas MacArthur invaded the Philippines, his forces were fighting in New Guinea, almost 1,500 miles from those islands.

THE WAR TODAY

—By DEWITT MACKENZIE—

The most important news of the moment is that the Allied armies which have stormed across the Rhine in the greatest operation of its kind in history are so firmly installed on German soil east of this mighty river that they cannot be thrown back to the west side—they are there to stay and to continue their drive into the Reich.

This doesn't mean there won't be heavy enemy resistance in some areas. The time of major counter-attacks by the Nazis is yet to come, and we must expect these, especially in the north between Emmerich and the Ruhr. Here the Germans have their best troops—including their crack first para-troop army, which also comprises tanks and infantry—to protect this strategic gateway to the Westphalian plain that flanks the Ruhr and leads to Berlin.

It is the ambition of the Allies to force the Hitlerites to stand and fight on the northern flank, which is adapted to tank warfare. If that battle eventuates it will be a fight to a finish, our immediate objective being the annihilation of this German army.

Nazi Field Marshal Kesselring, who has been brought up from the Italian theater to supplant Field Marshal von Rundstedt, is a capable and determined fighter. Perhaps more important, he is said to be staunchly loyal to Hitler.

Thus far German resistance on the whole has been weak. Kesselring hasn't anything like sufficient troops to defend that long Rhenish front. He is facing more than 1,250,000 Allied troops, and if he has half that number he is exceedingly lucky. Even if he has, they're far inferior in quality.

One of the most important phases of this titanic Allied offensive is that wild drive straight into the heart of the Reich by the racing armored columns of General Patton, who again is proving his right to the nickname of "Old Blood and Guts."

This sensational thrust by Patton's Third Army may prevent the Nazi forces to the north from ultimately retreating southward into the Bavarian Alps where Hitler has prepared a "fortress" in the Berchtesgaden region for a final stand. It's too soon to predict such a development, but it certainly must be considered as a possibility.

This would be one of the great coups of the war. Undoubtedly it would shorten the conflict by reducing the number of troops Hitler may be able to collect in this Alpine region. The Fuehrer is said to have made great preparations in the way of assembling supplies and building fortifications for this final defense in the mountains.

General Patton's whirlwind thrust is helped by the fact that the German First and Seventh armies on that sector of the front were all but wiped out in the recent offensive by the U. S. Third and Seventh armies west of the Rhine. The Nazis have their big stuff up north.

Another important aspect of the situation is the intensification of the Russian drive for Austria. Two Red armies are smashing for Vienna, and the Third Ukrainian army in Hungary is less than two score miles from the Austrian border.

Thus the back-door to the Reich

SMALLER WAR PLANTS GETTING MUCH BUSINESS

$9,571,000 Aggregate for Months of January And February

Small war plants in the Columbus district, which includes Fayette County, are doing all right for themselves in obtaining new war orders.

Since the battle of the bulge in Germany succeeding months have shown a sharp upsurge. P. C. Houston, District Manager of Smaller War Plants Corporation, announced today.

Although procurement of war contracts for small business through SWPC cooperation in the Columbus district was but $1,024,101 in December, heavy demands of the armed services boosted the aggregate to $9,471,414 through January and February.

Columbus District is well up in the national percentage as listed in the latest report to Congress of Maury Maverick, chairman of SWPC. The report showed that in December and January, SWPC, in cooperation with procurement agencies, nationally obtained $432,155,000 worth of prime contracts for small plants. This was an increase of $139,000,000 or forty-seven percent over the previous two months.

The report disclosed that prime contract awards to small plants throughout the country had reached a total of $2,100,000,000 as of December 31, 1944. The increase in the last 12 months was 66 percent over the previous 16 months. Subcontract procurements increased proportionately, it was stated.

"The report shows," Houston said, "that small plants can be put to war work in a hurry. Using small plants more extensively will do away with the need for the building of additional facilities, is in dire peril. Successful penetration of Austria would bring the Russians up against Hitler's Alpine "last stand" fortress. Taken in conjunction with Patton's headlong push, it holds out fascinating possibilities.

Uncle Sam's Babies
Sure, the babies are getting a break, war or no war. Indeed, they may be getting a better break in this topsy-turvy war time than their little predecessors did before the war. Uncle Sam has his eye on them. Dr. Martha M. Elliott, associate chief of the Children's Bureau at Washington, says that 750,000 children and their mothers have been cared for during this war, under the emergency maternity and infant care program. Half a million babies have been born with help from this program, and 200,000 more are lined up and on their way.

It is pleasant to realize that the same government which has the unpleasant job of sending fathers to war has also the satisfaction of helping to look after the children of those fathers. It is no more than fair, and it is a service for which no American is likely to grudge the cost.

Worst War Job
Fire, fabled to have been brought by Prometheus from heaven, and one of the supreme gifts to mankind, seems to be developing also into one of the most terrible forms of modern warfare. We used to read almost incredulously of medieval cities being put to the torch, but such practices seemed to be dying out in civilized Europe. Yet lately hardly a day passes without news of cities burned in western Europe and Japan as if it were normal and legitimate procedure. And we Americans are now doing our share of the burning.

It is a form of warfare to which Americans have been driven by hard facts. The Japanese, who launched their Pacific war without cause, have fought from the first without regard to their own pledges of humane procedure. That left, apparently, no recourse except trying to overcome them with doses of their own medicine. And we are evidently better at that game than they are themselves. We have better tools and supplies, and more science. So we burn down their great cities, in order to stop their depredations and compel peace. But we hope we shall never have to do another job like that.

The Home Stretch
The toughest part of this war is still ahead. The toughest, that is, for the home front. It will come after the victory over Germany.

Civilians are weary of controls and rationing, of mechanical breakdowns, of separated families, of all the worries of war. They have been looking forward to VE day as a sort of universal remedy. Many think the men will start home, controls will be eased, civilian manufacture will begin, and everything will be rosy.

That isn't the way it will be. For the war with Japan is only in its middle stages. We seem to have defeated their navy, but their army is still 90 percent intact. Many of our service men will be sent from Europe to the Orient. Some will come home, but not nearly all, for some time.

Controls and rationing may even get stiffer, according to government reports. The more of the world we reclaim from the Nazis and Japs, the more we are being held responsible for. People must be fed until they can grow crops and start factories again.

Many things, indeed, will be better. If all Americans remember that VE day cannot be the end, is not complete victory, the

Kwajalein Development
On Jan. 29, 1944, the first marines waded ashore on islets of Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshalls, and a week later had almost all of Kwajalein Island under control. But that is only the first part of the story. The second half is one of incredible building, which has turned the island into a focal point on the routes from Pearl Harbor to the Marianas, Philippines and other points west.

Capt. Walter G. Thompson, commanding officer of the Kwajalein naval base is proudest of the cooperation attained among the services. The Navy handles all mail and communications, the Army the food. Both the Naval Air Transport Service and the Army Transport Command use it, and both have built enormous hotels, capable of lodging hundreds of transients each. This is not wasteful duplication because not only are all the many cargo and passenger planes daily full on every trip, but so, often, are both hotels. The men of the army, navy and marines, themselves, have built a chapel at which all worship.

It's only one example of the power and speed of the American war machine, and also of the smoothness of its cooperative performance out there.

Without Shame
To show their patriotism, Seattle welders maintained a strike for 17 days, which was very damaging to ship construction. Then they went back to work. Theirs is only one of countless work stoppages of a similar nature. Strikers suffer no penalties so long as other men fight and die to maintain a striker's right to loaf. Men who strike and keep others from working, while their brothers die, must be without shame.

Shortness of Breath as A Symptom of Heart Trouble
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.
DYSPNEA means shortness of breath. It is uncomfortable because of the labored, difficult breathing. Dyspnea is often the earliest sign of a damaged heart. It causes more discomfort than all of the other heart symptoms together.

According to Doctor Tinsley K. Harrison of Dallas, the continuation of dyspnea adds further strain to an already damaged heart, and so intensifies the condition which caused the shortness of breath in the first place.

There are different kinds of dyspnea. For example, there is the shortness of breath which comes only after exercise. It always occurs when the heart is failing and means that the reserve strength of the heart is lacking. Orthopnea is shortness of breath which comes when a person is lying down. Dyspnea occurring in the evening is the type in which the difficulty with breathing gradually increases during the day and may prevent sleep.

Cardiac asthma is a kind of dyspnea which usually occurs in heart disease due to high blood pressure and hardened arteries. The attacks of shortness of breath come at night, and there usually is a collection of fluid in the lung tissues. Of course, if the heart disease is severe enough, the shortness of breath is constant. Shortness of breath may lower the pressure within the chest. This may further increase the congestion in the lungs and bring on pulmonary edema or fluid in the lungs.

Tomorrow, Dr. Bundesen will discuss "Penicillin Lozenges."

Distinguished beauty, brilliant talents and the heroic qualities that play a more or less important part in the affairs of life sink into a comparatively minor place among the elements of married happiness. Power to soothe, to sympathize, to counsel and to endure are more important than the highest qualities of the hero or the saint. HELEN COMES HOME
by Watkins E. Wright
CHAPTER TWENTY
HELEN WATCHED ZOE hurry down the lane, and then told Nebuchadnezzar to get a move on. She even hummed a little. The meeting she had been dreading hadn't been at all bad. Quite natural in every aspect, in fact. Evidently Zoe wanted to be friends; evidently she didn't even feel that she had done anything in the least out of the way in running off with another girl's fiancé.
"Giddyup, Nebbie!" she said.
Dick said: "She's purty, but I don't like her much."
"Mrs. Wentworth?" said Helen.
"Yes'm. People never call a boy 'Dickie' unless they're sort of—of silly."
Helen put her arm about the boy, hugged him close to her.
"She didn't mean anything, Dick," she said. "Lots of people just don't understand how boys feel about their names."
Dick grinned. "You do, Miss Sellen," he said. "You and Miss Muniffr."
"And your dad?"
"Yes'm. But Dad understands everything."
They came to the end of the lane and turned west. Soon they could see the water of the little lake glimmering through the trees. A white heron, disturbed by the sound of Nebuchadnezzar's clumping feet, soared upward, his long, thin legs stretched out behind him, his long neck and beak stretched out before him.
"I wonder," said Helen, "if we can find a boat."
"Old Mr. Mosher, who takes care of the boathouse when summer comes," said Dick, "ought to be around some place."
They got out and tied Nebuchadnezzar to a tree, and then they ran down a winding walk which ended at a rustic sort of building that served as a dance pavilion and a protection for the flat-bottom boats that were for hire.
"Listen!" said Dick. "I hear someone hammering."
"So do I!" said Helen. They hurried toward the sound, and found Mr. Mosher. "Well, a sight for sore eyes!"
Mr. Mosher looked up, adjusted his glasses. "So are you, Miss Sellen," he said. "Haven't seen you in ages! Recollect many's the time I took you out in one of them boats."
"I remember also," said Helen. "Have you got one Dick and I can use now?"
"Er course I have!" The old man led them to a boat which had recently been painted. "You can take this 'un out and chisten her."
"With champagne?" said Dick. "Like the warships?"
"Only 't'ing lackin', son, is the champagne. Reckon you'll have to sprinkle a little lake water on her and let it go at that."
They all laughed. Mr. Mosher shoved the boat out into the water and held it while Helen and Dick got in.
"Hey!" he called. "Don't forget the oars." He handed them to Helen and gave the boat another little shove. "Reckon this here's the beginnin' of summer, all right." He chuckled. "Looks like my business is startin' for a fact."
Helen adjusted the oars in the locks and soon the boat was being rowed out into the center of the lake.
"Let me help," said Dick. "I can take one oar and you the other."
"All right," Helen said. "Come sit here beside me."
Dick moved cautiously and took one of the oars. "Gosh," he said, as they began rowing together, "all the boat does is go around in circles."
"That's because I'm pulling too hard," said Helen.
Dick looked at her. "You're nice, Miss Sellen," he said. "It's because I don't pull hard enough—that's what you really mean."
"Nonsense!" said Helen.
They rowed about for nearly an hour. Then, when they had delivered the boat to Mr. Mosher and paid for its use, they got their picnic lunch.
"Where do we eat, Miss Sellen?" Dick asked.
"On top of that knoll over there," Helen answered.
They climbed the little path that led up to the moss-covered rock. Helen spread out a tablecloth while Dick looked on, his eyes getting bigger and bigger.
"Gosh, what a lot of good things to eat!" he gasped finally.
"I told Zeke to fix all the things he thought a growing young man like you would prefer," said Helen. She made a gesture with both hands. "And this is the result!"
They settled down and began eating. The food tasted wonderful. Helen thought. She enjoyed it as much as the boy there with her. Sunlight, happiness, a quiet lake, an old man loving his boats, working with them, painting them with a tender use of the brush. That was what living should be.
"Now," said Dick. "I'm going to take the things down to the lake and wash them."
"If you want to," Helen said. "They can be washed at home, you know."
"Zeke's done enough," said Dick. "Fixing this picnic for us. I won't let him have to clean up after us." Helen smiled. She watched the boy go down the walk with two plates, two knives and two forks. Then suddenly the smile disappeared. She remembered something Philip had said up in New York: "It's got to be the war to end all wars! It's got to be! And if I ever feel like weakening a little—sort of slowing up—let I have to do it look down at Dick's face while he's sleeping, and then—" She closed her eyes for a moment, as though to shut out visions of battlefield, of men torn and wounded, of dead men lying out there under a blazing sun or a freezing snow. Philip was right. There must never be another war, a war that would reach out and take the young men that were now small boys, like Dick, like that sturdy, handsome little fellow down there scrubbing two plates with sand and lake water.
Then she thought of Paul—of Zoe—of flying.
It would be nice to go out to the Wentworth plantation house for dinner. She had been there many times in the old days—when Mr. Wentworth was living, when she and Paul had their dreams. And the more she thought about it, the more she hoped that Philip would consent to go with her.
Dick came back. He placed the plates and silver in the picnic hamper. Then he sat down. He gazed out across the lake for a little while.
"You know what, Miss Sellen?" he said presently.
"Do I know what—that?" said Helen.
"I think if my mother had lived," said Dick, "she'd been just like you."
"You do?" Helen said softly.
"Yes'm." Dick fell silent again for a time. "And do you know what I wish, Miss Sellen?"
"No, Dick."
"I wish—since she didn't live—that you'd come and stay with Dad and me—and take her place."
Helen reached out her hand to him and he took it. She drew him over to her, laid his head against her breast.
"Darling," she said, a huskiness in her voice, "no matter what—you are Helen's boy."
"Geel!" said Dick. "Am I?"
"You bet you are," said Helen. She ran her fingers through his blond hair and looked out over the water that was being rippled gently by an affectionate breeze. "To keep him safe—to keep him safe—for always," she said in her heart. And Dick, growing drowsy there in the afternoon, tranquilly closed his eyes and went to sleep.

VETERANS' GUIDE
BY MAJOR THOMAS M. NIAL
The fly-by-night, phony schools or training institutions that are likely to blossom (and some, it is reported, already have budded) are going to put constant pressure on state authorities to get on the approved lists.
For it's the states which will make up these lists. The Veterans' Administration has nothing to say about what schools go on the list. It has to take any list of institutions furnished by the "appropriate agency of each state"—presumably the State Education Department. The V. A. has been given the right to add schools, but it can't remove any from the lists submitted.
So do anything you can to see that your state list is kept clean. Even if you aren't interested in training or education for yourself, you may help some fellow ex-service man, if you use your influence to prevent padding of your state lists of approved schools. Please don't sit there with an opinion on your face. You have no influence? Say, today anyone with a vote and a voice has influence.
Another thing. The V. A. has started to set up a system, and is now enlarging it, which will afford "vocational guidance." Yeah, I know. My reaction was just the same as yours. "Vocational guidance." Could only be theoretical—a waste of time—was my thought. But, honest, it's OK. It's very useful.
H. V. Stirling, director of the Education Section of the V. A., suggests that all veterans seek vocational guidance if at all possible. The Veterans' Administration won't insist that you get this service, but an ounce of suggestion should be worth a pound of lure.
Disabled vets can get this guidance, and their travel costs for nothing. Already some of the best schools in the country are ready and qualified to give this vocational guidance. They charge a fee.
The V. A. will pay the fee for you (disabled or not). If you aren't disabled and if your home doesn't happen to be in the same town with one of these schools

Sixth Anniversary Sunday Occasion for Initiation, Tea, Program at Legion Home

Alpha Delta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Observes Anniversary with Social Affair At American Legion Home Here

On Sunday afternoon the Alpha Delta Chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma celebrated the sixth anniversary of its founding with an initiation and a social affair at the American Legion Hall. The initiation, which took place early in the afternoon, was conducted by the president, Miss Jane Durant, and the other officers of the chapter, wearing the traditional caps and gowns. Lighted candles and the rich paraphernalia of the sorority lent solemnity and impressiveness to the ritualistic ceremonies of the Delta Kappa Gamma.

The two initiates were Mrs. Ada Katherine Minshall and Mrs. Olive Woodward.

Later in the afternoon more than fifty guests and members assembled in Legion Hall which had been artistically decorated under the direction of Miss Bess Bruce Cleveland, with spring flowers, and a color scheme of yellow and white. The president, Miss Durant, opened the meeting with an informal talk and introduced Miss Chloe McGlinchay of Columbus, State Founder of the Delta University, founded the local chapter.

Miss Durant turned the meeting over to Miss Marjorie Evans, program chairman, who presented Mrs. Mary Jean Schwaigert in a number of very lovely piano solos which included "Claire De Lune," by Debussy, and also the "Serenade of Doll" from "The Children's Corner Suite," also by Debussy.

Miss Evans introduced the guest speaker of the afternoon, Miss Carolyn Scott of Columbus, who formerly was a teacher of English and dramatics in South High School. Miss Scott now is engaged in educational work in the Columbus Y. W. C. A., and gives at least one book review each week.

Miss Scott took as her theme the story of the book "Green Years," written by Dr. A. J. Cronin. It is the story of an Irish lad, Robert Shannon, with a brilliant mind, who, orphaned at an early age, found a home with distant relatives in a distant state. The speaker painted the story in simple language and her listeners lived with the boy through years of heartbreaking experiences which finally led to financial and educational success, and the adoption of a paganistic and communistic philosophy of life by the boy, grown to manhood.

One day on the street, the young man met his pastor who stopped to inquire why he no longer attended church. "Father," said the boy, "I have lost God." "O don't worry about that," said the priest, "God will find you," and he went on. The words stayed. They echoed and re-echoed through the young man's mind until years later he knelt at the altar where God found him. He had returned to the faith of his fathers.

The social hour was highlighted by the serving of delicious refreshments consisting of tea, dainty sandwiches, cookies, candies and nuts. Miss Durant and Miss Gladys Nelson poured at an equisitely appointed table centered with a watergarden of Easter flowers, daffodils, carnations and roses.

Hospitalities were extended by a committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Harold Craig, Mrs. Howard Fogle, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Jesse Maddux and Mrs. Carl Smith.

Hosts At Party

Dick Korn and Don Denton combined hospitalities Saturday night when they were hosts to a party at the Korn home.

The round of entertainment progressed as the guests played cards, and danced the evening away. A desert course was served during the course of the evening.

Those present were Miss Cynthia Gage, Mary Lou Toops, Lucinda Harper, Peggy Norris, Carolyn Lou Bidwell, Joan Campbell, Mary Twining, Carolyn DeHart, Melba Thomas of Jeffersonville; Bob Craig, Dick O'Brien, Gene Sagar, Dean Burdon, Bill Andrews, Dave Looker, Bob Kelly, George Trimmer, Drexel Hynes, David Mossbarger, Bob Willis and the two hosts.

Fakirs are religious mendicants, common to all creeds of India.

Easter Tea Held Sunday At Pattons

The Woman's Missionary Society of the North Street Church of Christ held a business meeting and Easter tea at the home of Mrs. C. A. Patton on Washington Avenue, Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Edwin Swartz conducted the program with the theme "Our Missionary Work in the Philippines." Three papers had been prepared by Mrs. Duckwall, Miss Norma Flee and Mrs. Sherman Hidy.

The devotional program had been arranged by Mrs. Edwin Swartz which was extremely beautiful and touching. A large picture of "Christ in Gethsemane" was flanked by tall tapers with an open Bible before the picture. Offerings were placed on the Bible during the service, with Mrs. Swartz telling the story of the picture.

The social hour which followed was highlighted by a delightful tea with Mrs. Sherman Belles and Mrs. C. A. Patton presiding at attractive silver tea services. The dining table was covered with a pretty lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of carnations.

Several guests enjoyed the delightful program and tea with the members of the society.

Helen Wakefield Bride Of Lt. Thomas Buchanan In Columbus Friday Eve

Reception at Church Follows Ceremony Which Was Attended by a Number of People from Here; Will Reside in Columbus

Rose and white, Phi Mu Sorority colors, was the scheme used in the floral arrangements on the altar of Bexley Methodist Church for the marriage of Miss Helen Wakefield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Wakefield, Oak Cliff Lodge, Sunbury, O., and Lt. Thomas Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Buchanan of Washington C. H., Friday evening.

Baskets of white flowers centered with rose-colored carnations were placed against a background of palms and ferns and lighted by a pair of seven-branch candelabra. The double-ring ceremony was read by Dr. Joseph M. Gray at 7:30 o'clock. A program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Joan Beard, soloist, and Miss Virginia Rosenbaum, organist.

The torso bodice of the bride's white satin wedding gown had a sheer yoke embroidered with a seed pearl design and long sleeves tapering to points above the wrists. A long train extended from the full folds of the skirt. Her fingertip veil of illusion was gathered to a band of orange blossoms or illusion with white pompon on either side. Her sorority pin was fastened to the streamers of her colonial boucquet of mixed flowers encircling an orchid.

The sister of the bridegroom, Miss Jean Buchanan of Dayton, was maid of honor and only attendant for the bride. Her gown was of rose-colored moire taffeta styled on old-fashioned lines with full skirt and short puff sleeves. She carried a colonial bouquet and wore a tiny gold locket, gift of the bride. Her headdress was a pink band of pink illusion with pink pompon on either side.

Lt. Richard J. Wakefield, brother of the bride, was best man. Four sorority sisters of the bride acting as usherettes were Miss Ann Cheney, Miss Gwen Eberhardt, Miss Jan Steinbrenner and Miss Marjorie Simmons. Mrs. Wakefield chose a charreuse crepe frock with matching hat and wore a corsage of spring flowers in pastel shades. Mrs. Buchanan chose for her son's marriage a print frock in orchid and gray and her hat was of a harmonizing shade. Her flowers were a corsage of camellias.

Both mothers attended the wedding and the reception which was held later in the church parlors. Assisting them as hostesses at the reception were Mrs. Glick Busbee, Mrs. Ernest McLaughlin and Miss Esther Kreglow. After receiving the guests, the bride changed to a raspberry red ensemble and navy blue accessories for her short wedding trip.

The bride's table was prettily appointed and decorated in the pink and white colors of her sorority. Centering the table which was lighted by candlelight, was a three-tiered wedding cake. Lt. and Mrs. Buchanan capably performed the ceremony of cutting the cake before 60 reception guests.

The former Miss Wakefield is a senior at Ohio State University where she is studying occupational therapy. She is vice president of Phi Mu Sorority. Lt. Buchanan attended Ohio State University and at present is assigned to the Quartermaster Pool at the Columbus Army Service Forces Depot. The couple is residing at 62 Hoffman Ave.

Among those from here and out of town for the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Blackmer, Pfc. Eugene Orr, A-S L. L. Brock, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, all of this city; Miss Jean Buchanan Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Butts of London.

Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan were host and hostess to the bridal party at the rehearsal dinner, Friday evening, preceding the dinner. Rehearsal was held at the church on Friday afternoon, after which they adjourned to the Maramor restaurant.

Let's Get Down to Bed Rock

More than 75,000 homes in Ohio are waiting for telephone service

WHY IS THIS? For more than three years all telephone manufacturing plants and man power have been devoted 100 per cent to making field communications equipment and electrical weapons for the army and navy and nothing for civilian use. All reserve telephone equipment has been exhausted and everything stretched to the utmost.

IS ANY RELIEF IN SIGHT? Frankly, no. There is no indication that the military authorities are going to cut down on their demands, so it is going to be some time after Germany and Japan are defeated.

HOW FAST WILL YOU MOVE? When military need for communications equipment ends, it will take some time to reconvert the telephone manufacturing plants and start the switchboards, cables, wires, instruments and scores of other items flowing. After that, much more time will be required to install this equipment and fit it into the existing system before it can be used to connect telephones already in use.

WE PROMISE REAL SPEED when the materials and trained man power are available. Telephone people are looking forward as anxiously as you to the days when they can say "yes" to every request for telephone service.
